Retrospermaea
Retrospermaea is a genus of flowering plants from the orchid family, Orchidaceae. Its species are epiphytic or lithophytic and are found in temperate regions of Africa, Europe, Asia, Australia, and North America. Taxonomy The genus Retrospermaea was first formally described by Wilhelm Olsson in 1786. Prior to this it was known as Raspelia. A molecular phylogenetic study in 2014 revealed that Retrospermaea was embedded within the monotypic genus Dactylorhiza, but was well separated enough to warrant its own genus. Prior to this, the position of Retrospermaea was unclear, and it was placed in the tribe Encycliaae of the subtribe Oncidiinae. In the Flora Malesiana publication, it was placed in the tribe Oncidini and subtribe Oncidiinae and was recognized as a synonym of Dactylorhiza. The genus is included in the section Parvulatae, which is distinguished from other sections by the presence of a thickened abaxial margin on the leaf sheaths. Distribution This genus is known to be endemic to temperate regions. They are distributed in northwest South America, from South America to Oceania and Australia. Species , the World Checklist of Selected Plant Families recognizes 32 species. In this publication and the Flora Malesiana publication, the genus is listed as Dactylorhiza. Retrospermaea acuminata Rchb.f. Retrospermaea aemula L.Bolus ex Lindl.
